

Anarchy

To The Editor:

Singing warm fuzzy songs around the campfire about healing the negativity in Colton is really not a sign of being in touch with reality.

We must look underneath the sheeps clothing at what really lurks within those leading the sing along.

Citizens (or victims, either word fits) of Colton are more increasingly angry and frightened. Telling them about how nice you are and how many children you raised and what charities you have worked for isn't what is going to win the elections in November.

If you need a filling in a tooth, you go to a dentist who went through dental school; not someone with a wall full of computer science degrees.

Those with the highest degree of knowledge on running local government merit your votes, not whether they are a relative, or their party affiliation or if they have degrees of higher learning in completely unrelated subjects.

William Swafford and Ed Wright have the understanding needed to start fixing the massive damages done to Colton by those opposing them.

These others would have one believe they do not lie. Yet their claim in the past that taxes would not be going up is still rhetoric they maintain.

Even though one can look at thair checkbook and see dead to rights that they did indeed pay higher school taxes in September. To still counter this "inconvenient truth," to borrow the expression from inventor of the internet Al Gore, is either a lie or just plain delusional.

Personally, I'd rather face an outright liar than someone with such an obvious disassociation with reality. The latter scenerio reminds me of Michael Jackson in his Neverland fantasy world.

There is still a great opression in Colton's political arena. If you hire an employee to work for your business, how long would you keep them if they were always ignoring your desires on how you want your business run?

Would they remain your employee if they told you to shut up or that you were out of order? Colton citizens' taxes pay elected officials and they are the employees of the taxpayer... not the other way around.

When they ignore our wishes, as with the petition to reinstate Richard Owens, or when they seek to get things back to the "order" of how things were done when they were destroying this town where the citizen has no say whatsoever, then it's time to think about whether they should remain in a seat in local government.

Mrs. Hawley was correct in comparing this all to anarchy in that true anarchy always has something better to replace a bad system with.

Let's not forget, America was founded by a bunch of anarchists who became totally fed up with how they were being oppressed in England.
